

The LECs operate an "essential facility", and should have to accommodate other ISP firms that wish to purchase access from them. This wholesale provisioning stimulates competition and benefits consumers. Likewise, it is impractical for competing firms to lay miles and miles of separate cable infrastructure. Therefore, I believe it is logical for Cable companies to allow other service providers (like ISPs) to purchase access to the cable lines.